

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a skin care article exhibiting a scrub cleaning effect by friction and comprising at least one first and one second external layer made of a fibrous material. The inventive article is characterised in that the first layer (10, 10', 10'') forms an absorbing cushion and substantially consists of low-micronaire cellulose fibres, in particular less than 8, and the second layer (20, 20', 20'') is substantially consists of high-micronaire fibres, in particular of micronaire higher than 8, said layers being selected from the following materials: flax, ramie, sisal, jute and hemp separate or mixed.